

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention relates to an effective option for recognizing error concealment, provided by a method and a device for evaluating data containing useful information that has been received via a communications network. The present invention is characterized in that the use of error concealment is detected after receipt through a statistical analysis of the useful information.